Introduction

This Exelixis Corporate Code of Conduct (the “Code”) speaks to all aspects of how Exelixis officers, directors, employees, and contractors are expected to conduct themselves when representing Exelixis (the “Company”). It reflects our corporate values. It also underscores our commitment to comply with the international, national, and regional laws and codes that regulate our business activities as a biopharmaceutical company.

Familiarity with this Code is important for a baseline understanding of the Company’s expectations. However, because the Code is general in nature, the Company also publishes and maintains additional policies, rules, and procedures that address specific activities, specific functions, or the specific rules and requirements in certain countries. These materials are updated and improved from time-to-time so they remain current, clear, and practical. It is important that you are attentive to the notices and training you receive concerning these materials, and fulfill your responsibilities in compliance with them, so that you are able to meet the Company's expectations.

Finally, no amount of materials or training may reasonably address every situation that you will confront as you go about your work in our complex, highly-regulated industry. In all situations, you must be prepared to exercise good judgment and common sense in deciding the right actions to take.

Asking Questions & Raising Concerns

If you have questions about this Code, or about Exelixis' policies, rules, or procedures, do not hesitate to seek guidance from your manager or your Legal Affairs & Compliance representative. Similarly, if you suspect or know that a violation of this Code or of Exelixis' policies, rules or procedures, has taken place, you must promptly report that information.

Such questions and concerns are most appropriately addressed first to your supervisor. However, if that is not comfortable (or turns out to be ineffective), you may also contact Legal Affairs & Compliance, Human Resources or a member of Exelixis senior management or the Ethics Committee, chaired by our CEO, and also including Legal, Finance, Development, Business Operations, Human Resources and Compliance. Any discussion will be kept confidential, consistent with conducting a thorough investigation.

You may also provide information to members of the Ethics Committee directly, on either an anonymous or self-identified basis, via the Exelixis Ethics Helpline, at www.ExelEthicsHelpline.com or by calling the toll free number (800.461.9330). This helpline is the gateway to a system that permits the disclosing party to communicate directly with members of the Ethics Committee. If you choose to identify yourself, your identity will be kept confidential, consistent with conducting a thorough investigation.

How concerns are handled – our commitment to non-retaliation

Exelixis has no tolerance for retaliatory actions taken against employees who raise good faith questions or concerns. Any person who raises a good faith question or concern about the application, or possible violations, of this Code or Exelixis policies, rules or procedures will receive management's support.

There will be no retaliation against anyone raising a concern in good faith. To the contrary, any act or threat of retaliation by other Exelixis personnel will in itself be considered a serious violation of this code.

All concerns will be fully and fairly investigated. Appropriate disciplinary action will be taken against anyone who violates this Code or Exelixis policies, rules or procedures. Disciplinary action will also be taken against any manager who permits or condones Code violations by employees under his or her supervision.

Violations will be considered on a case-by-case basis to determine the appropriate response. Considerations to be taken into account include, without limitation, whether there was intent to violate the rules, how significant the violation, candor and cooperation with any investigation, and any history of past violations. Sanctions for violations of the Code may range from an oral warning, to a written warning placed in the permanent employment file, to suspension, to termination, or other sanctions as appropriate.

Each quarter, the Audit Committee of the Exelixis Board of Directors receives a complete and fulsome report of any and all disclosures made through the Ethics Helpline, including follow-up investigations.
